Question 1. Detailed report of events. Interaction reported via dingo.ranger email 26/04/2017.

"My daughter (nearly sch 4 - personal and I had returned earlier than our travelling group. She was playing in the surf wash (ankle deep), when my step-so sch 4 - personal boy), who returned in the interim with another of one of our travelling companions, alerted me to an approaching dingo. The dingo came quickly down to us in an aggressive manner from a southern position on the beach.

I took my daughter's hand and backed slightly into the surf and then maintained my position. I kept eye contact on the dingo as it prowled around me at close range looking for a way to get to my daughter. Unfortunately, I only had a towel and didn't have a stick with me. I hadn't previously noticed any dingoes near our car, but was aware from the walking trail signage that an aggressive dingo was in the area. This was a mistake on my part.

After about a minute or so, my step-son approached the dingo with a stick (i.e. from up the beach near our vehicle). The dingo then retreated up the beach in a circular manner towards our car and headed for the other travelling companion sch 4 - personal irl) who was standing next to our car. We called to her and she quickly got into the car. By this stage my daughter, step-son and I had walked up to our vehicle and got into it. During this time another dingo came down the southern part of the beach. It kept its distance and joined the other aggressive dingo, which had wandered up the beach in a northerly direction. Both dingoes stopped for a small period when approached by a car that had arrived near the entrance to Lake Wabby, before heading off in a northerly direction into the vegetation.

The experience near the Lake Wabby entrance was a stark contrast in behaviour. The events happened quite quickly and it was the last thing I expected while watching my daughter and waiting for my other travelling companions to return from Lake Wabby.

Ranger 7027904 followed the dingo with his vehicle (sounding the horn to alert the girl and her mother supervising) as it started to gallop towards the girl that was digging in the sand. The dingo came within 50cm of the girl before she was startled by it and ran to her mother 3m away. The dingo then circled the young girl and her mother before her attention was then drawn to the girls older brother sch 4 - personal inf

The dingo darted towards the boy from approximately 10m. It came to within 50cm of the boy but was startled and deterred by the boy stepping towards the dingo when it was within 1m of him. Ranger 7027904 was then able to drive his car between the boy and the dingo. The ranger told the family to stay in a tight group as he got out of the car and deterred the dingo.

The dingo's attention was then turned to a family approximately 70m north along the beach. The ranger followed the dingo as it galloped towards the 3 adults and 2 young children and drove his vehicle in front of them so the dingo could not approach closely. This deterred the dingo who then traversed north along the beach into the dunes.

The entire sequence of events was captured on the ranger vehicles dash cam and saved with this interaction on the Eurong hard drive.

Question 1. Detailed report of events. On 5/10/17 at 17:30, I was walking back from waddy point towards the barracks and was approached by an untagged sub adult male dingo. As I was nearing Binngih Sandblow, the dingo stood up from where it was laying on the sand dune and began sprinting towards me at pace. It stopped about 10 meters from where I stood abruptly and waited for me to move. When I went to keep walking it started to follow at which point I turned around and walked directly towards it to deter the dingo and it ran away. The dingo stopped about 25 meters away, it then lay down and vocalised towards me. Less than a minute later when two vehicles drove by and slowed down the dingo ran towards them as it had done at me and walked right up to the cars doors. The dingo then continued to loiter for approximately one minute, eventually losing interest and moving on. (See Code C_20171005_Untagged SA Male_Waddy-Con_Soliciting food)
