COMPACTION & HARDNESS MEASURING TOOLS

The use of a hand penetrometer (SAND TRACKS) - a single continuous compression to the desired depth to measure the resistance to vertical penetration to obtain the compressive strength of the cohesive track profile, not the actual racing surface. This will provide a pressure reading, relative to the pressure / force required to penetrate the required depth.

The use of a cone penetrometer (GRASS TRACKS) is a 3-drop method to measure the resistance to vertical penetration to obtain the compressive strength of the cohesive track profile, not the actual racing surface. This will provide a pressure reading, relative to the pressure / force required to penetrate the required depth.

The Clegg hammer measures the compaction of the soil (1 DROP FOR SAND, 3 DROPS FOR GRASS). The measurement reflects the hardness of the surface and subgrades.

Moisture meters measure the water content in the subbase (below the track surface). An even, consistent reading is desirable around the entire track.

The profiler tool is inserted into the surface in a vertical upright position and to a minimum depth of 75mm. This takes a full depth cross-section of the sand track profile and allows the curator to look for any visible fractures or layer issues within the profile. Any fractures in the profile needs to be rectified and/or monitored.

COMPACTION & HARDNESS MEASURING TOOLS

The use of a hand penetrometer (SAND TRACKS) - a single continuous compression to the desired depth to measure the resistance to vertical penetration to obtain the compressive strength of the cohesive track profile, not the actual racing surface. This will provide a pressure reading, relative to the pressure / force required to penetrate the required depth.

The use of a cone penetrometer (GRASS TRACKS) is a 3-drop method to measure the resistance to vertical penetration to obtain the compressive strength of the cohesive track profile, not the actual racing surface. This will provide a pressure reading, relative to the pressure / force required to penetrate the required depth.

The Clegg hammer measures the compaction of the soil (1 DROP FOR SAND, 3 DROPS FOR GRASS). The measurement reflects the hardness of the surface and subgrades.

Moisture meters measure the water content in the subbase (below the track surface). An even, consistent reading is desirable around the entire track.

The profiler tool is inserted into the surface in a vertical upright position and to a minimum depth of 75mm. This takes a full depth cross-section of the sand track profile and allows the curator to look for any visible fractures or layer issues within the profile. Any fractures in the profile needs to be rectified and/or monitored.

COMPACTION & HARDNESS MEASURING TOOLS

The use of a hand penetrometer (SAND TRACKS) - a single continuous compression to the desired depth to measure the resistance to vertical penetration to obtain the compressive strength of the cohesive track profile, not the actual racing surface. This will provide a pressure reading, relative to the pressure / force required to penetrate the required depth.

The use of a cone penetrometer (GRASS TRACKS) is a 3-drop method to measure the resistance to vertical penetration to obtain the compressive strength of the cohesive track profile, not the actual racing surface. This will provide a pressure reading, relative to the pressure / force required to penetrate the required depth.

The Clegg hammer measures the compaction of the soil (1 DROP FOR SAND, 3 DROPS FOR GRASS). The measurement reflects the hardness of the surface and subgrades.

Moisture meters measure the water content in the subbase (below the track surface). An even, consistent reading is desirable around the entire track.

The profiler tool is inserted into the surface in a vertical upright position and to a minimum depth of 75mm. This takes a full depth cross-section of the sand track profile and allows the curator to look for any visible fractures or layer issues within the profile. Any fractures in the profile needs to be rectified and/or monitored.

Other information provided:

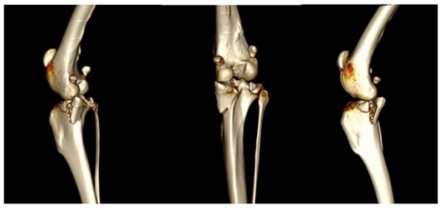
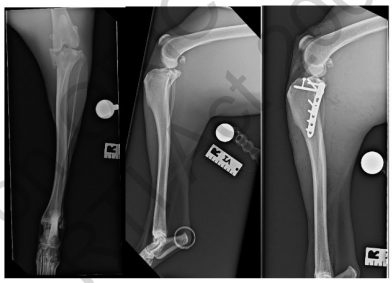
Surgery at QVS, with cautious prognosis. Greyhound developed an infection whilst still in hospital, and then a second infection again at home. Owner elected to euthanase. Laidley Vet 1/7/2022.





Right stifle, medial tibial plateau fracture (comminuted)

Medial approach made to right stifle, pez elevated to allow visualisation of fracture site. Reduction performed. Reduction - point to points, aiming forceps s.73 underwent surgery to repair a RIGHT medial tibial plateau fracture. Preop CT assessment confirmed that th fracture was involving thr articular surface and was comminuted (multiple fracture fragments). During surgery, anatomical alignment was achieved and a 2.7mm 7 hole LCP plate along with multiple screws to hold the bone in place whilst it heals. Pre and post-operative radiographs are shown below. Given s.73 sustained an articular fracture, she will never have a 'normal' stifle. She will develope arthritis in her right stifle. Postoperative she developed a surgical site infection. This has been managed with a course of antibiotics. Once the antibiotics have finished her surgical site will need to be closely monitored for recurrence of infection.

Brief History

Client Communication:

Given severity of articular fracture. s.73 is expect to have intermittent lifelong dysfunction. She will develop OA secondary to this injury. Hopefully she is comofrtable enough, once healed, to keep the limb - time will tell.

Stewards report:

Dragged down from behind rounding the home turn as a result trailed the field and took no further competitive part in the event. A post-race veterinary examination revealed the greyhound to have a serious injury to the offside stifle, the greyhound has been treated and is to be taken to Stafford Veterinary Clinic for further assessment, the incident will be referred to the injury review panel.
